

Pregnancy and Delivery Labor: Social Memories among the Quilombolas of Sapê North / ES

Abstract

Focusing on the intersection between traditional populations and the modern global forces, the general objective of this research is to delineate, between a group of quilombolas, the memories about pregnancy and delivery labor usually related to the history of the group. Understanding how their care and traditional treatments are related to this shared past and how the recently environmental and social changes are impacting these practices and representations.

Keywords: Social Memory, Identity, Quilombolas; Traditional Populations.